CBE joins plans for Stampede arts campus

JEREMY NOLA'S
jeremy.nola@metronews.ca

Curtains will be raised in the coming years on a performing-arts campus that's been discussed for a decade and would be located smack-dab in the heart of a redeveloped Calgary Stampede Park.

The Stampede Youth Campus would grant youngsters a real-world taste of life as a performer through a partnership with the Young Canadians, who are featured nightly on the grandstand during the Greatest Outdoor Show on Earth.

"Some of it is the synergy of like-minded spaces and for them (students) to be able to do their academics as well as their performing arts in the same space," said Phil Heerema, an administrator with the Young Canadians.

Previously, Heerema said discussions about the campus had been mostly "blue sky," but now both the Calgary Board of Education and Calgary Arts Academy have pledged involvement in the project.

The CBE in particular listed its on-campus facility for the first time in its 2014-17 capital plan, which was released this week and functions as a school-funding wish list for the provincial government.

The public school board is requesting $14 million for a facility that would house 400 students and feature all the spaces of a typical school, including a gymnasium and learning commons.

CBE infrastructure head Frank Coppinger said the project was added to the list as a "placeholder" while further discussions occur on the project.

"Certainly, there's a demand among students for more of this performing arts (learning)," Coppinger said. "I would think it's going to take another 12 months to work our way through that to finalize that vision."

The campus would operate in a similar manner as the National Sports School at Canada Olympic Park, allowing students to tailor their learning around an intensive training schedule.

A final price tag for the project and the total number of students it would serve was not available Wednesday, but Calgary Stampede spokesperson Doug Fraser said it would be developed on the west side of the Elbow River, between 12 and 14 Avenue S.E. The first phase of the campus could be ready by 2016.

Stormwater

Still work to be done for cleaner water

Calgary is not only drawing less water from its rivers than in the past, it's also putting out cleaner water downstream.

"Water quality today is actually a lot better than it was 30 years ago," said Wendell Koning, a Bow River water-quality specialist with the Alberta government.

That's partly due to improved wastewater treatment, Koning said, and partly due to people being more responsible about what goes into the storm-water system.

"People used to pour their old oil down there or their old paint as a matter of course," he said. "Virtually nobody would do that anymore."

That comes as welcome news to Lynn Robb of Trout Unlimited's Yellow Fish Road Program, which sees volunteers paint brightly coloured fish near storm drains to remind people that anything flowing in will end up flowing into a local waterway.

"Stormwater pollution is actually the biggest threat to our freshwater ecosystems," Robb said.

The city has taken steps in recent years to reduce the amount of suspended solids, phosphorus, and other pollutants.

Rain gardens in the city's older communities and ponds built into newer communities help provide primary treatment, Robb said, but about 80 per cent of stormwater still ends up making its way back into rivers and creeks untreated.

Calgary drew less water from the Bow and Elbow rivers last year than it did nearly a decade ago and remains on pace to use less water in 2030 than it did in 2003, according to a new city report.

"We're certainly proud of it," water resource planning and policy leader Margaret Beeston said of the 2012 figures, which show the city is on track to meet its long-term conservation goals.

A total of 178.5 billion litres were drawn from the two rivers in 2012. That's down from 212.5 billion litres in 2003, even though roughly 200,000 more Calgarians are now consuming water.

Upgrades to the city's water treatment and distribution system have helped drive consumption down, Beeston said, as have the collective conservation efforts of citizens.

"We wouldn't see the reduction in demand without Calgarians," she said. "They're obviously key to the success that we've seen."

The city has now installed water meters for 93 per cent of its residential customers, Beeston said, with only about 20,000 flat-rate customers left.

Metered customers use roughly 60 per cent less water than flat-rate customers, she noted.

Ald. Jim Stevenson thinks the city should go a step further and, in addition to single-family homes, install meters on new condominium developments, as well — something he noted doesn't currently happen.

"To me that is a problem," he said. "There's no penalty for people who leave their taps running or have a leaky tap or that sort of thing."

Source of savings

- Treatment plant upgrades made in 2007 allow for some water to be recycled, cutting down on river withdrawals by about 14 per cent a year.
- Calgary's decade-old leak-detection and water-main replacement program has resulted in about 17 million litres per day.
- Cash incentives have led to 50,000 traditional toilets being replaced by more efficient toilets, saving an estimated 233 million litres of water last year.

Transit pass for low-income youth slow to catch on

Passed up. Program fixed situation where low-income youth paid more than adults

jeremy.nolas@metronews.ca

Calgary youth seem to need a push from their parents to sign on for a new, cheaper pass to ride city transit.

During the first two months (March and April) of a pilot project offering a $44 monthly pass for riders under the age of 18, just 143 have opted in and all have parents who already use the adult low-income pass.

"It's been pretty slow so far," conceded Rick Archer, customer service co-ordinator for Calgary Transit, but he expects it to pick up over time.

Calgary Transit has said offering the pass could cost up to $800,000 annually if 30 per cent of eligible youth use it.

Archer added that no "independent" youth — those who aren't in school and no longer live with their parents — have signed on.

Both he and Ald. Brian Pincott, who steered efforts to improve low-income access to transit during November budget deliberations, said more needs to be done to promote awareness of the pilot.

Still, Pincott, who's estimated as many as 10,000 city youth could qualify, wasn't dissuaded by the numbers.

"I'm thrilled that 143 youths' lives got a little bit easier — that ultimately is

Much improved

Youth did previously get a discount on monthly transit passes, but the $57.50 they paid was still higher than the $44 forked out by adults qualifying for low-income passes.

- Go get one. Youth can sign on for the new pass by printing an application from calgarytransit.com, phoning 403-262-1000 to have a form mailed or by visiting the Calgary Transit customer-service centre at 224-7th Ave. SW.

Longer surgery waits possible

Alberta Health Services. CEO says many surgical suites are shuttered for summer, which could lead to longer waits

Patients face bed closures and possibly longer waits for surgery as the province works to make the system leaner and more efficient, Alberta Health Services announced Wednesday.

CEO Dr. Chris Eagle told a news conference that many surgical suites are closed for six weeks over the summer, but that may soon be increased to 10 weeks.

"Obviously there's a trade-off there. If you have more closures, you're potentially having a longer wait list, so we're going to have to watch that very carefully," said Eagle.

The surgery change is one of a number of options Alberta Health Services, or AHS, announced in its new 2013-16 business plan.

One goal is to find $220 million in savings in the upcoming year to be re-directed into critical areas such as community and emergency care.

The plan is to increase community-based funding by almost 10 per cent to $1.2 billion, which would allow for more continuing care, palliative and hospice beds, and other services.

Emergency and out-patient services would receive 6.4 per cent more, for a total of $1.5 billion, to reduce pressure on and overcrowding in emergency wards.

Number of new nurses hired likely to drop

Alberta Health Services wants to freeze staffing levels and get more nurses working full-time instead of part-time, meaning a likely reduction in the number of new nurses being hired.

"We're looking at limiting hiring and trying to keep the organization at roughly the 100,000 employees that exist today," CEO Dr. Chris Eagle said Wednesday, as AHS released detailed financial plans for the next three years.

"We really need to make sure we're hiring full-time workers and that has an impact on how many positions

AHS has a target, as well as an agreement with the United Nurses of Alberta, to hire at least 70 per cent of available RN grads each year.

we need to fill, too."

About 60 per cent of nurses currently work part-time, Eagle said, a figure AHS wants to cut to 30 per cent.

But prospective RNs at the University of Calgary aren't overly concerned about their job prospects, according to Graham Courtney, president of the Undergraduate Nursing Society.

"We all know that cycles come and jobs may be limited, but we're not too worried that (will) last long," he said. "If you look at our health-care system, there's new hospitals opening up, and I know many nurses that are retiring."

More than 98 per cent of available RN grads in Alberta are projected to be hired in 2012/13 in some capacity, according to AHS, with 78 per cent hired to non-casual positions. ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Dru Marshall, vice-president and provost at the University of Calgary, has warned research growth could bear the brunt of cuts to provincial post-secondary funding. METRO FILE PHOTO

Medical research could see ripple effect of tough budget

Post-secondary. U of C says it will have tougher time bringing in top minds in wake of funding losses

JEREMY NOLAÏS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Millions in research funding could be threatened by budget cuts that will hit the faculty of medicine at Calgary's biggest post-secondary institution particularly hard, officials are warning.

The University of Calgary will not replace 50 retiring medical faculty members between now and 2017 and is also looking at scaling back pay for hundreds of academic physicians and bringing in fewer students.

This all comes in response to funding cuts from both the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Medical Research and the Academic Alternative Relationship Plans.

Program dean Dr. Jon Meddings warned last week further impacts could come as the university crafts a new vision in response to a 7.3 per cent cut in provincial funding announced in the March operating budget.

The situation is particularly problematic at a time when the province is pushing hard on the post-secondary sector to generate additional revenue through research and other means.

But Dru Marshall, university vice-president and provost, indicated that would be tough to do while addressing the crowd at a budget town hall earlier this month.

"This does provide a loss of research power ... when we lose more senior people and replace them with younger people," she said of the cuts.

But Alberta Health says it's simply retooled its approach to medical research, focusing more on funding project outcomes rather than long-term salaries for researchers.

"This way, by funding projects, we'll be able to have measurement and an indication of what happened with the research," spokesperson John Muir said. "We'll know a bit better of how public dollars are being invested."

Marshall has said previously the U of C may be forced to revise timelines for targets laid out in its heavily-promoted Eyes High strategy, which aims to turn the school into a top-five research institute in Canada by 2016.

Rubbing out illegal 'body rub' workers

Crackdown. Bylaw aims to separate legitimate businesses from those offering sexual services

jeremy.nola@metronews.ca

Few "body rub" businesses have registered with city officials under a new bylaw, leaving the chief licence inspector to suspect that many have packed up and left town.

Starting Jan. 1, the city moved to separate legitimate massage practitioners — those recognized by a representative association — from others offering similar services.

The thinking was those businesses in the latter category were more likely to engage in illegal sexual activity.

To date, just 47 "body rub practitioners" have registered, but each person has until their annual licence renewal date to make the distinction.

Still, chief licence inspector Kent Pallister said he believes the bylaw has made it tougher for illegitimate massage parlours to do business.

Massage practitioners

1,884

The city has 1,884 licensed massage practitioners, but that number could fall as some come forward to classify themselves as a "body rub" practitioner instead.

"Now that we're forcing people's hand, having them prove they are bona fide massage practitioners ... we've had people stop offering massage altogether," he said Wednesday. "I would never accuse anybody of (illegal activity) until it's proven. But what we are seeing is a reduction in complaints about business clustering."

The new bylaw mandates body rub businesses can't open within 300 metres of existing ones and are subject to higher levels of law-enforcement monitoring.

City council members supporting the bylaw had indicated it would allow police to crack down on illegal sexual activity, but Calgary police Det. Cam Brooks said it's business as usual in his vice unit.

"As the complaints roll in, that's when police get involved and determine whether to investigate (the businesses) from a criminal perspective," he said.

Omar Khadr. Ex-Gitmo inmate now in Alberta jail

Former Guantanamo detainee Omar Khadr woke up in an Alberta prison Wednesday after months stuck in isolation at a penitentiary in Ontario where an inmate threatened his life, The Canadian Press has learned.

Khadr was flown to the Edmonton Institution Tuesday, potentially ending a situation in which he was deprived of prison programming that complicated efforts to seek parole, his lawyer Dennis Edney confirmed.

"Hopefully, this is a positive step in his long journey to freedom," Edney said. "I hope that this is a new start for Omar, an opportunity for people to see him as he really is — as someone who poses no threat to Canada, someone who has no radical viewpoints."

The transfer allows Khadr to be closer to his Edmonton-based lawyer and should obviate concerns about negative influence from his family in Toronto, some of whom expressed sympathy for al-Qaida years ago.

The maximum-security Edmonton Institution is home to about 225 inmates.

Drugs. Guns and gangs unit lays multiple charges

Police announced several charges against three people Wednesday following an investigation by the guns and gangs unit.

On May 23, officers conducted a traffic stop on a vehicle leaving a home thought to be used for drug storage.

The driver was allegedly in possession of marijuana worth $2,280, and $955 cash.

Phuc Di Ly, 55, is facing one count of possession of a controlled substance for the purpose of trafficking and one count of possession of proceeds of crime.

In a home on Hampstead Rise N.W., officers found $219,000 worth of marijuana. Calgarians Si Tan Nguyen, 42, and Phuong Quoc Hoang Le, 32, have also been charged.

In a separate incident, the Calgary Police Service guns and gangs unit executed another search warrant in the 3000 block of 23 Ave. S.W. after a two-month investigation.

Inside the home, they found cocaine worth $1,200, a machete, body armour, packaging materials, a gun holster, and electronic scales, as well as $1,000 in cash.

Roberto Soto, 27, of Calgary is facing multiple charges.

MPs, parties face big CRTC fines

Political parties, elected officials and the telemarketer used by the elusive "Pierre Poutine" to make fraudulent telephone calls during the 2011 federal election have been slapped with hefty fines for breaking the rules for robocalls.

The CRTC made the announcement Wednesday that it has dished out $369,000 in penalties as part of an investigation into the use of robocalls. The regulator also hinted that more fines are coming.

The federal Conservatives and NDP, Ontario's Progressive Conservatives, Alberta's Wildrose party, Liberal MP Marc Garneau, Conservative MP Blake Richards and Edmonton-based RackNine Inc. were all fined for various offences.

The penalties run from a few thousand dollars for Gar-neau up to $90,000 for Wildrose — the largest amount ever levied against a political party. So far, the regulator says, Wildrose, the Ontario Conservatives, the NDP, RackNine and Garneau have all paid their fines.

The federal Conservative party, which was fined $78,000, and Richards, who was fined $14,400, have yet to pay and have 30 days to do so.

"We appreciate the cooperation we received during our investigations," CRTC chief compliance officer Andrea Rosen said in a statement. "We expect political party associations and candidates who are running for office to put appropriate safeguards in place to ensure compliance with the Unsolicited Telecommunications Rules in future campaigns."

Mayor Ford to fascinate

At least they're paying attention. Many Americans can finally say they know something about Canada

America's fascination with the Rob Ford crack-cocaine scandal is showing no signs of dissipating almost two weeks after news emerged of an alleged cellphone video that appears to show the Toronto mayor sucking on a crack pipe.

NBC's The Today Show featured a segment Wednesday on the latest developments in the scandal that's engulfed Ford's administration, while an array of different U.S. and international news outlets are covering each and every twist and turn in the saga.

"Any time you have to hold a press conference and say: 'I don't smoke crack' — not a good day," Today co-host Savannah Guthrie said of the show's report from Toronto.

Ford has called the crack-smoking accusations against him "ridiculous" and said the alleged video doesn't exist.

But interest in the story has only intensified in the U.S. amid an exodus of Ford employees this week and a reported tip to one of the mayor's closest staff that a young man could have been killed in relation to the alleged video.

"Murder Now Part of Toronto Mayor Rob Ford's Crack Cocaine Video Scandal," shrieked a headline this week on the Hollywood Reporter website.

"Was Someone Murdered For The Rob Ford Crack Video?"

asked another in New York magazine.

Toronto police, for their part, have reportedly said their investigation of the matter isn't a homicide probe.

The Atlantic, meantime, poked fun at Ford's denial of crack-cocaine use. "I did not have smoking relations with that crack pipe," a post on the mag's website jokingly quoted Ford as saying, a nod to former president Bill Clinton's infamous denial of an involvement with White House intern Monica Lewinsky in the 1990s.

"I do not use crack cocaine, nor am I an addict of crack cocaine," were the mayor's words in a statement at city hall last week.

"Way to go, Canada!" Wolkette, the D.C.-based political website that delights in skewering politicians of all stripes, wrote Wednesday of allegations in a Globe and Mail piece over the weekend that the mayor's brother, Coun. Doug Ford, dealt in hashish in the 80s. Doug Ford has categorically denied the allegations in the Globe story, which was based on unidentified sources.

British media are following the story intently, perhaps for the same reasons U.S. news organizations can't tear their eyes away — it's simply too juicy and too un-Canadian to be ignored. The Guardian, the Independent and an array of British tabloids have featured several stories on the scandal.

"And you thought Boris Johnson was scandal-prone?" read a headline on a Ford piece in the staid Independent earlier this week in reference to London's mayor. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Police arrested a Disneyland employee on suspicion of putting a so-called dry-ice bomb in a theme park trash can, where it exploded, authorities said Wednesday.

No one was injured in the small blast, but Disneyland briefly evacuated the Mickey's Toontown section where Tuesday's incident occurred.

Barnes, who worked as an outdoor vendor, was held on $1-million bail and is co-operating with investigators, Dunn said.

Loaded gun found on seat of Walt Disney World ride

A Walt Disney World patron on a ride with her grandson found a gun on her seat.

Officials said Wednesday that the woman found the loaded pistol on the Dinosaur ride at Animal Kingdom. The woman gave the weapon to a park attendant who then contacted the authorities.

The owner of the gun, Angelo Lista, told authorities he discovered his gun was missing after leaving the ride. He has a concealed weapons permit. Lista told authorities he didn't know Disney World patrons weren't allowed to bring guns. A New Mexico man faces charges after police say he was having sex with a woman while driving drunk and crashed, ejecting the woman from the vehicle.

The Albuquerque Journal reports Luis Briones, 25, was found with one shoe on and his shorts on inside-out Monday night after he wrecked his Ford Explorer in Albuquerque. Police say the female passenger was found naked outside the vehicle with deep cuts to her face and head.

Teen faces child porn charges after sex video posted

Exploitation. 14-year-old turns himself in to police, will appear in court on June 20

HALEY RYAN
Metro in Halifax

A 14-year-old boy from Preston, N.S., has been charged with making child pornography after police allege he posted a sexual video of himself with another teen online.

On April 8, investigators in the RCMP-Halifax Regional Police integrated child exploitation unit say they learned of a video showing a 15-year-old girl performing a consensual sexual act with a 14-year-old boy.

Echoes of Rehtaeh Parsons

- Rehtaeh Parsons, a 17-year-old Cole Harbour, N.S., teen, took her own life in early April, two years after she was allegedly gang-raped and then bullied by classmates over a shared photo of the incident.
- Glen Canning, Parsons's father, took to Twitter Wednesday: "Still it didn't take long in this case as opposed to the 1 1/2 (years) + for Rehtaeh's case. Hard to figure this out."

"Once it's been recorded, it becomes child pornography because of the age of the person involved," said Halifax Regional Police Const. Pierre Bourdages.

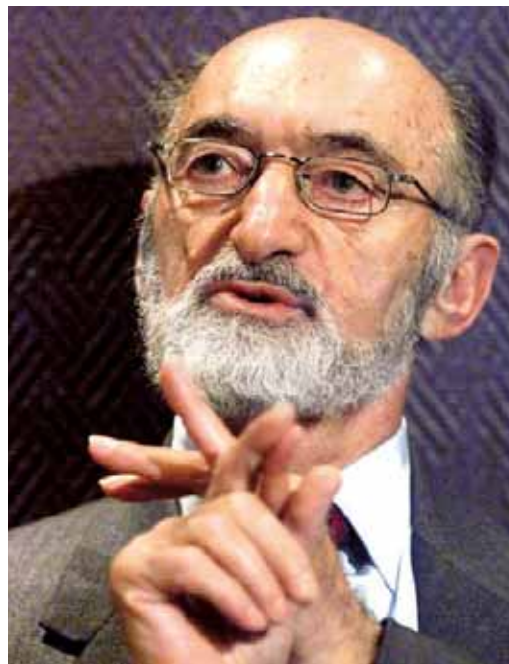

Police say the video was taken at a party where alcohol was being consumed, then posted to a social media site. The website deleted the video after police made them aware of the case.

"However, given the nature of the Internet we can never really be sure that the video is not anywhere else," Bourdages said.

Police also confiscated the phone with the original video.

The youth turned himself in to police on May 24 and was arrested.

The 14-year-old is charged with possession and making of child pornography, and making child porn available to others. He has been released on conditions to not contact the victim, use the Internet or a device that can access the web.

Abortion-rights crusader dies

Dr. Henry Morgentaler, who helped overturn Canada's abortion law 25 years ago, died Wednesday at his Toronto home. He was 90. To his enemies he was a mass murderer, but to many he was the man who shed light on back-street abortions and put women's health and choice on the front pages of newspapers, TV screens and radio airwaves. PAUL CHIASSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pipe baby's mom says she couldn't afford abortion

The mother of the Chinese newborn trapped in a sewer pipe in a stunning ordeal caught on video had raised the initial alarm and was present for the entire two-hour rescue but did not admit giving birth until confronted by police, reports said Wednesday.

The 22-year-old woman, whose name was not revealed in state media reports, confessed to police when they asked her to undergo a medical checkup.

The woman told police she could not afford an abortion and secretly delivered the child Saturday afternoon in the toilet. She said she tried to catch the baby but he slipped into the sewer line and that she alerted her landlord of the trapped baby after she could not pull the child out.

The baby was mostly unhurt, according to local reports. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Austerity measures can prove deadly, authors say

Health care. As politicians around the globe grapple with economic crises, a new book argues that deep health-spending cuts have increased HIV, malaria and suicide rates

Quoted

"If austerity was a treatment it would never have passed clinical trials. This is a matter of life and death."

David Stuckler, co-author of The Body Economic: Why Austerity Kills

Brian McArdle had not worked after a stroke left him paralyzed and partially blind. The former security guard, 57, could not eat by himself, but as part of the U.K. austerity campaign, McArdle was assessed, found fit to work and his support was stopped. The following day he died of a heart attack.

Such tragedies form the premise of The Body Economic: Why Austerity Kills, a startling new book from epidemiologists David Stuckler and Sanjay Basu. They mined data sets from the past century and across the world, and found the numbers show the hidden cost of health spending cuts.

"What we learned is that recessions are neutral to health. What matters is how politicians respond," Stuckler told Metro. "When they make deep cuts to vital social protection systems it can turn social hardship into severe epidemics."

No example is starker than Greece, where a 40-per-cent

Demonstrators clash with police during a protest against plans for austerity measures in Athens, Greece, in this October 2011 file photo. cut to health spending has allowed HIV infection rates to double. Mosquito-spraying programs were stopped, and malaria returned after being controlled since the 1970s.

Over 200 medicines vanished from pharmacies as budgets shrank. "The evidence of a causal link is compelling," said Professor Martin McKee of the London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine.

A less visible mental health crisis is also growing. The World Health Organization report a 40-per-cent rise in suicides in Italy between 2007 and 2010, with local studies attributing most to economic issues.

AIRLINES CHARGING BY THE GROAN

Here's an important announcement for the nation's frequent flyers: Canada's airlines will now be charging passengers who bring aboard excess emotional baggage.

Be prepared.

You may bring small amounts of angst and annoyance with you as long as they're in clear plastic bags, but if you spend the entire flight sighing about flying, there will be extra fees.

For instance:

- If a passenger whines that his 800 km/h flight has been delayed by half an hour, he will pay as he boards, through the nose.
- If a passenger is convinced her plane is going to crash because of "turbulence" roughly as powerful as an electric toothbrush, she will throw money into a scare jar.
- And if passengers give any hint they believe flying is an inconvenience instead of a scientific wonder, they will pay for bus fare, and I will gladly stretch out into their empty seat.

You may sense that I'm a strong proponent of these new rules.

HE SAYS
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

It's true. I love flying, and the only thing that annoys me about flying the friendly skies is how unfriendly it makes the people around me. I don't often see airports stressing people out, so much as I see people deciding they're stressed out because they're at the airport.

I'm under no illusions that flying is perfect — getting decent food on a plane has become pie in the sky — but almost every negative experience I've had in 100 flights or so can be traced back not to airlines, but to other people. Welcome to Air Sartre, where No Exit is clearly marked.

I can honestly say I've not once had a bad flight, knock on the Spruce Goose. Is it because A) I've been lucky, or is it because B) of my incredible travel skills and, yes, attitude? To decide, let's ask me: It's B.

Follow these tips and feel my wind beneath your wings:

Delays: Channel your mother telling you about a starving kid on the other side of the world when you wouldn't eat. Next time you're slightly delayed before heading onto a freaking Sky Ship, remember that somewhere in the world someone's driving a Pontiac Aztec.

Safety: Relax, dude. Your flight is not "rough" if people are drinking coffee from open-faced cups. You can't even manage that on a bus. Heck, you can't do that on a coffee table with a wobbly leg. If turbulence is making you nervous, place a beer on the tray in front of you: If it's not sloshing, you're fine; if it is sloshing, drink until you are too.

Wonder: If you're having a hard time remembering how amazing human flight is, consult the famous poem High Flight by John Magee, but add whatever complaint you have as a closing line, for context.

Oh! I have slipped the surly bonds of Earth/
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God/
However, I did not enjoy the chicken.

Of course, if you don't follow my advice you can simply pay the new emotional-baggage fees. Or if you'd like to tell me how I'm wrong given the state of modern airlines, then send me an email and we can sit down and talk about it.

As per standard industry procedure, this reservation may be overbooked.

Artists go paint brush to paint brush for good cause

Charity. All proceeds from Art Combat will go to Alberta Animal Rescue Crew Society

BACKSTAGE PASS
Lisa Wilton
calgary@metronews.ca

A handful of Calgary artists are getting ready to rumble this week — all in the name of charity.

Art Combat will pit nine professional painters against each other in a fierce battle to win the hearts and minds of a pack of wild, bloodthirsty art lovers.

That might be a wee exaggeration. But there will be a few tense moments as competitors in two groups work quickly to finish a piece of work in 30 minutes. Winners of the first two rounds will then go head-to-head in a third round for bragging rights as Calgary's live art champ.

"It's supposed to be a fun competition," explains Clarissa von Stetten, president of the Alberta Animal Rescue Crew Society (AARCS.)

"A theme is announced before each round. They're more inspirational themes, which is what AARCS is about. It might guide their art in a certain direction and it draws the audience into the competition."

Von Stetten was looking for a unique way to raise funds and increase awareness of the Calgary-based

Nine artists will compete at the first Art Combat event Thursday night at the National Music Centre in support of the Alberta Animal Rescue Crew. SUPPLIED non-profit organization when she remembered hearing about similar art contests being held in New York and Toronto.

"Those ones were more harsh," she says. "The artist with the least votes gets their piece of art destroyed by a chainsaw. We want the competition to be there, but we want it to be a friendly competition. We don't want any heckling."

At the end of each round, audience members will have the opportunity to vote for their favourite piece, as well as bid on art work in a silent auction.

In addition to the art created during the evening, each artist has been invited to bring his or her portfolio along for people to view.

"This event not only supports AARCS, but also the art community," says von Stetten.

"Our hope is people will support the artists outside of this event as well.

"Anyone looking for an original piece of art, this is going to be a great place to obtain (it) for a fairly reasonable price."

Details

- Art Combat takes place Thursday at the National Music Centre (134 – 11 Ave. S.W.) starting at 7 p.m.

- Tickets are $20 in advance at the AARCS Safe Haven Shelter (3851 – 21 St. N.E.)

or for $40 at the door, with all proceeds going to the Alberta Animal Rescue Crew Society.

- Artists competing are Dean Stanton, Roni Jurgenson, Erin Myers, Len Cochrane, Karin Taylor, Clayton Conner, Tanya McMahon, Joanne Chang and Deanne Chene.

Dave Franco is getting tired of playing the bad guy. HANDOUT

The other Franco

Interview. Dave Franco, James' younger brother, talks about being a nice guy and how he was dragged into acting

MATT PRIGGE
Metro World News

Dave Franco is known as two things: James Franco's little brother and an on-screen jerk. In 21 Jump Street, he played an entitled high school drug dealer.

In Warm Bodies he was the bitter boyfriend of a girl in love with a zombie.

"I promise this is not a representation of me," Franco says. "At first it was really fun and liberating playing something outside of myself, to be mean. But after a while, not only have I exhausted this kind of role, but people start thinking this is how I really am. I promise I'm a nice guy."

In Now You See Me, a big-budget, all-star caper, he gets to play a mostly nice guy, albeit a sleight-of-hand artist first seen stealing from a tourist.

The production style introduced new aspects that he needed to get used to.

"Louis Leterrier is a very visual director, and a lot of the scenes have multiple cameras flying about, circling around you," Franco says. "Most of the time you have no idea whether or not the camera is catching you."

He also had to learn card tricks.

"I can now cut a banana with a playing card," he reveals. "I wanted it to look realistic."

Though the film's cast is filled with big names, it's hard to be star-struck when your brother is James Franco. He claims his brother didn't get him into the business.

"His manager is the one who dragged me into this whole mess," he says. "My brother has been very supportive. But we don't talk about acting all that much. That said, he did tell me to be patient; to wait for projects I'm genuinely passionate about."

On playing younger

Franco is 27 years old, but looks like a kid. That's why he often gets roles playing younger characters.

- Quote. "I don't love it," he says, "but it's more about the role than the age. Everyone always says, especially in the business, it's great to look a lot younger than you are, for longevity's sake. But sometimes I just want to look my damn age and play a character my age. I don't want to play high school again."

After Earth originally began as a father and son story. HANDOUT

Will and Jaden get a little wild

After Earth. Superstar father and son team up in an apocalyptic adventure dreamed up during the filming of Karate Kid

MICHAEL FREIDSON
Metro World News in London

In After Earth, Will and Jaden Smith play a space-age father and son who crash land on our planet, which was abandoned years ago and is now inhabited by wild beasts. Can the young boy survive out there alone, after his dad is injured? A month back, we sat down with Will, 44, and Jaden, 14, for their first one-on-one about the film, which you may have read in our Earth Day edition. Here are unseen excerpts from that free-wheeling back-and-forth.

Will, you have a story credit on this film. It came from you?

WS: It started off as a father and son story.

JS: It started on Earth originally.

WS: Yeah, it was—

Review online

Visit metronews.ca to read Steve Gow's review of the film, which opens today.

JS: OK, here's what I remember: On Karate Kid, as I'm leaving to walk out the door, he's writing all night, he's got a beard, he's looking out the window, not even at me, and he goes, "Jaden, is the word 'Ursa' scary?" And I was like, "Dad, I'm trying to learn Chinese, I don't have time ..." And he starts writing and goes, "Yeah, that's scary."

WS: Ursa is bear.

JS: He was like, you need a movie where you're by yourself and you have to survive in the snow and a pack of wolves come and you have to kill all the wolves and I was like, "Yeah? I don't want to do that." Somehow we got from there to here.

WS: I wanted to work with the Karate Kid! And I was experimenting with the time juxtaposition of a story. Hamlet in 322 B.C. Or the power of a story to go through time. If you put Job in 2016, what's that look like? Do the relationships and emotions still survive in the centre?

At the centre, it's a very powerful father and son drama wrapped in the summer sci-fi blockbuster packaging.

Jaden, on top of the movie, you have your own clothing line, MSFTS. When did you start dressing yourself?

JS: That probably happened around 10 or 11. I used to wear my pants really high, up to my belly button, and my mom would be like, "You can sag your pants a little bit." So one day, I started wearing my pants to my knees. Then I found a happy medium.

WS: Mid-thigh?

JS: Well, now it's drop crotch. (Shows off his MSFTS pants.) Don't need to sag them down.

Could you pull those off Will?

WS: Those days are behind us.

JS: You used to wear pants like this.

WS: Those were the Hammer pants.

JS: (Sighs) No, they're not. Don't keep saying that! You can't keep saying that.

Do you have a passion to make communities safer?

So you think you can top this summer show? Ask the expert

Dancing queen. Mary Murphy talks about former contestants, fellow judges

MEREDITH ENGEL
scene@metronews.ca

So You Think You Can Dance may be in its 10th season, but judge Mary Murphy is having no less fun in her job.

The bubbly ballroom pro spoke with us about season 10 while en route to the airport for a TV appearance, her chatter infused with a hint of Southern twang and that signature gregarious laughter of hers.

The show is almost 10 years old — how does that make you feel?

It went by in a snap. I'm very grateful and really proud of the show and all the dancers that come back. I would say a good half of (this year's contestants) are probably 18. They've just been waiting for the day (they can audition). So many of them say, "I started when I was 9, dreaming about the day I'd be on So You Think You Can Dance."

It's starting to be like a rite of passage. Do you stay in touch with any former contestants?

We certainly do. One of our guest judges this year is gonna be tWitch (Stephen Boss,) who was one of our past contestants, and he's engaged to Allison Holker, another one of our contestants. I think they're our first wedding, even though they weren't on the same year — they met each other and did a lot of gigs together and fell in love. It's just the coolest thing. I think one of our executive producers is even gonna be marrying them!

How do you keep the show fresh and exciting after nine seasons?

As far as any new format twists, they haven't let us

Mary Murphy is a reality show judge — and a ballroom pro. GETTY IMAGES know of anything. I do know that they do plan on keeping the two winners this season and that was new last year. We have more new guest judges, which is always fun. Minnie Driver is a new judge this season — she studied dance at the Royal Ballet in England. ... A lot of these people have dance in their background and they love, love, love the show.

Katy Perry and John Mayer

Mayer and Perry get tongues wagging again

Two months after once again breaking up with Katy Perry, John Mayer has apparently smoothed things over with the Firework singer enough to make the guest list for her Memorial Day party at her new Hollywood Hills home, according to Us Weekly. "They seem to be back together — or back together-ish," a source says. "They were very flirty and having a really good time together. They have good chemistry."

Lipton reveals pimping past in Paris

Long before he hosted Inside the Actors Studio, James Lipton enjoyed a brief but profitable stint as a pimp in Paris, he admits to Parade magazine. "It was only a few years after (the Second World War). Paris was different then, still poor," he says, explaining that running a bordello gave him enough to live off of for a year. "I did a roaring business. That's how I lived. I was going through my rites of passage, no question about it. It was a great year of my life." Lipton's feelings about the practice of prostitution have clearly changed, though: "I think if you can't earn it on your own, then you don't deserve it."

Bynes targets cop in most recent Twitter tirade

Amanda Bynes took a break from starting fights with other celebrities on Twitter to brag about how things are going with her latest legal troubles. "My lawyer is getting my case dropped," she tweeted. The lawsuit-happy starlet also addressed the police officer she claimed sexually harassed her during her arrest last week: "His punishment will be being the cop who sexually harassed someone who would never find him handsome enough to be my boyfriend. That's worse than any time in jail," she wrote. "But I am suing him for money compensation. I love having more money in my bank!" The police, though, don't seem too concerned about Bynes' suit. "NYPD Internal Affairs investigators have found no evidence to corroborate Ms. Bynes' allegations," a spokesman tells E! News.

What the makeup artist says

"It's all about creating a base that grips," explains LA-based makeup artist Mélanie Inglessis. "For lipstick that lasts and doesn't bleed, apply a light layer of concealer or powder to your lips before adding colour. Or use a lip pencil that is the same colour as your lipstick. Draw the entire lip and colour it inside. The pencil is matte and creates a solid base."

What the makeup artist says

"Glitter may be a summer festival must, but don't use it on your eyelids. It's a loose particle, so you'd need a creamy, sticky base underneath to press the glitter on. And keep away from creamy eye shadow, as this is going to smudge," warns Inglessis. She recommends products that have a long-lasting effect such as a matte eye shadow or waterproof mascara. Another trick to stop things from melting away is to dab some concealer under the eyes: "The more your skin is bare, the more oil it has. The concealer will act like a shield and keep things in place," she adds.

Only a few stones away from singing Kumbaya by the fire

DIY ideas. Bring the feeling of the cottage home this summer with your own stone fire pit

As summertime approaches, people start spending more of their days and nights outdoors, especially for summer dining and entertaining.

Building a fire pit in your backyard creates a focal point in your outdoor design and adds warmth, light and ambiance, making your space a natural gathering spot for socializing, entertaining and relaxing.

With a few tips, Indoors Out can help you build the perfect fire pit to complement your social schedule this summer.

Step 1: Check building codes in your area

Before you begin building a fire pit, make sure that you are aware of building codes and regulations. Choose an area that is away from your house and any low-hanging trees. You'll also need to take precautions when digging holes so that you don't hit any utility lines.

Step 2: Purchase stone

Decide on a location for the fire pit and determine its size and shape. Using these measurements, select your materials from a stone yard. To save time, choose a pre-sorted premium stone such as palletized stone, which are uniform in size, shape and quality.

Step 3: Form a circle

Lay your stone pavers in a circle in the approximate size and shape of your fire pit. Most fire pits are typically about 36 to 44 inches in diameter.

Step 4: Dig your hole

Dig a hole about 12 inches deep once you've formed your circle.

Step 5: Fill with sand

Pour sand into the bottom of the hole and pack until its level.

Step 6: Lay your stones

Start laying your wall stones around the outside of the hole. Continue to stack the stones until they are about 12 inches above the ground.

Step 7: Fill with sand

Pour a layer of sand into the ring of stones so that it covers the first layer. This should be approximately four inches deep. Your fire pit is now ready to try out at your next get together.

Japanese paper lanterns still light up modern home decor

Akari. The lamps are popping up everywhere — from painter Georgia O’Keeffe’s home in New Mexico to Tony Stark’s bedroom in Iron Man 3

The round, white, paper light shades sold at Ikea for $5 are a familiar item in contemporary interior design. But these inexpensive lanterns are knock-offs of light sculptures created by the renowned artist Isamu Noguchi in the early 1950s.

The Noguchi lamps —

called akari, the Japanese word for light — were inspired by traditional Japanese lanterns used in ancestor worship. Over the decades, the akari became classics of mid-20th century modern home decor.

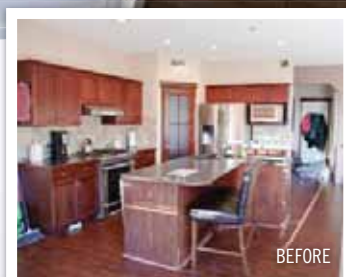

Noguchi’s original designs are still handmade in Japan;

they come in a variety of colours and dozens of geometric designs — including the widely imitated white sphere — and range in price from $100 to $1,000.

The story of how the late Noguchi came to create akari is rooted in the recovery of Japan’s post-Second-World-War economy and the cross-cultural currents that influenced his spare, bold, modernist aesthetics.

Noguchi’s mother was American; his father Japanese. They never married. Born in 1904, Noguchi spent years in both countries during his youth. After the Second World War, he was greatly admired by the art and design community in Japan, and at some point met the mayor of the town of Gifu, where local industry centred around making lanterns for ancestry worship, using paper from mulberry trees.

“The mayor asked Noguchi, ‘Can you help us resurrect our lantern business?’” said Jenny Dixon, director of the Noguchi Museum in Long Island City, N.Y. “That’s how the akari were first produced. They were exported as an economic product and were well-received by the design community.”

She added that Noguchi “papered them sculpturally. He didn’t call them lanterns or lamps; he called them light sculptures.”

Noguchi’s concept “stood in sharp contrast to 1950s contemporary, modern, efficient lighting trends,” said Peter Barna, provost of Pratt Institute, the art and design college in Brooklyn. Popular lighting options of the day included track lights, adjustable desk lamps and “pole lamps with conical shades,” added Barna, a former president of an international lighting design firm.

There are hanging lamps, as well as table lamps and floor lamps with metal legs or small, black, circular bases. Many appear breathtakingly elegant; others have a whimsical, futuristic look. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bright ideas for your dining room

A reader asks: I am looking for a chandelier to hang over my traditional dining table. Does it have to be the traditional brass/crystal style light fixture?

DESIGN CENTRE
Karl Lohnes
home@metronews.ca

Consider choosing an over-the-table light fixture that is more reflective of your space rather than worrying about matching the table and chairs below. The juxtaposition of a modern light fixture over an old table can add an interesting and eclectic look to your dining area. Consider looking at the architectural design of your space. In an arts and crafts home choose a light fixture with that style; in a loft choose something modern; in a Victorian home choose a period style of light. Matching the light fixture to your decor will add some validity to your choice and take the guesswork out of choosing a style not directly related to your dining table.

Here's a few classic examples; all at $200 or less. Try hanging one of these over a traditional dining table and listen to your dinner guests' oohs and ahhs.

Dynamic duo: Trout Burger and tasty Sweet Potato Fries

This burger and fries recipe serves four. THE CANADIAN PRESS H/O

Trout is available in all parts of the country, but there's no reason to limit the way it's served to pan-frying.

These burgers are great with sweet potato fries.

Smoky Trout Burger

1. Boil potatoes in lightly salted water until tender. Drain, mash and transfer to a large bowl.

2. Add trout, horseradish, shallots, zucchini, salt and pepper; mix well. Separate mixture into 4 equal portions and form into patties. Refrigerate for 1 hour.

3. Heat barbecue to medium-high. Dredge patties in flour and wrap each in 2 slices of bacon. Grill for 3 to 4 minutes on each side until golden.

Sweet Potato Fries

1. Heat oven to 230 C (450 F) and spray a large, shallow baking pan or rimmed baking sheet with non-stick cooking spray.

2. Cut potatoes lengthwise into quarters and then cut each quarter into 2 wedges. Arrange in pan single layer.

3. In a bowl, combine butter, salt and nutmeg and brush over potatoes. Bake

Ingredients

- 10 ml (2 tsp) creamed horseradish
- 6 shallots, finely chopped
- 175 ml (3/4 cup) grated zucchini, squeezed dry
- Salt and pepper, to taste

- 30 ml (2 tbsp) flour

Cookbook of the Week

Gone fishing

"I never met a fish I didn't like," Jeff Morrison of Ottawa states with conviction.

The avid sportsman, known as The Outdoors Guy in his blog, can now add author to his resumé with not one but two cookbooks coming out June 1 — Canadian Fishing Cookbook and Canadian Outdoor Cookbook.

Morrison has travelled the nation pursuing his passion for catching and eating just about every type of fish and seafood imaginable.

Consequently, his Fishing Cookbook, "is sort of like reading through a diary of my outdoor life."

While some dishes in the book may be more common in the regions where the fish originates — Maritime cod, northern pike, Pacific halibut, — most are accessible in fresh or frozen versions at supermarkets and fishmongers across the country. Other featured species — walleye, bass and trout, for example — are naturally found coast to coast. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Imagine a future where girls are empowered

Opportunities for a good education, growing up safe and secure with total access to health care, good food and clean water — these are things we take for granted for our children here in Calgary. But in developing countries, children — and especially girls — face lives of poverty, lack of education, health challenges and more. Read on to find out how you can help girls and their families in Hatibandha, Bangladesh.

What are the issues facing the children of Hatibandha?

A community surrounded by water, Hatibandha is vulnerable to flooding during the long, rainy season. For most of the inhabitants of Hatibandha, there is no flood shelter, high school or health-care centre close by. Eight-year-old Morzina's life is typical of children in this region. She lives in a one-room home with her parents and seven siblings. Her father earns just $3.75 a day as a labourer. Morzina is now in Grade 2, but it's likely that she'll leave school in the next few years.

Why is it so difficult for the children to get an education?

Hatibandha is challenged with untrained teachers, lack of supplies, and considerable safety issues. The only way to get to school during rainy season is by boat. "Only seven per cent of secondary school students are girls," says Sangita Patel, director of program management for Plan Canada. "Their safety is at risk travelling long distances to secondary schools." Morzina's teenage sisters are typical of girls in this region — one is illiterate, the other only completed school up to Grade 5.

Morzina reads her schoolbook in her family's one-room home.

Why is health care a major concern for girls in Hatibandha?

Once girls leave school, they are typically seen as a financial burden to their families, and many are married and start families at a young age. Morzina's mother had her first child at 17 and two of Morzina's sisters got married in their teens. "Ninety per cent of girls are married before they are 18, so many experience adolescent pregnancies in underdeveloped bodies," says Plan Canada spokesperson Abigail Brown.

"That's why health care — including maternal and newborn health — is especially important here, where mortality rates are high."

How does Plan Canada intend to help the people of Hatibandha?

Plan Canada will be providing essential training and resources for teachers, building separate latrines and dorms for girls and arranging boat transportation. "Our goal is to see all children realize their right to education — getting to school, staying in school, and receiving a good quality education," Patel says. To improve health care, "the Community Sponsorship program aims to rehabilitate health clinics, purchase medicine and equipment, retrain local staff and volunteers in obstetrics, and provide information on family planning, prenatal support, nutrition information and more, providing Hatibandha with better access to health-care basics."

What can you do to help?

For your donation of $37 a month, you will support a comprehensive community-based solution to improve the lives of children, especially girls and their families, in Hatibandha, giving them the promise of a brighter future. Please help by going online and making your commitment at plancanada.ca/calgaryhelps.

Girls have the potential to change the world, but they can't do it without you.

Right now, girls in the developing world are denied basic human rights, simply because they are girls.

We can change that, Calgary, for just $37 a month. By sponsoring the impoverished community of Hatibandha, Bangladesh, we can educate girls, reduce child mortality and fight child marriages. Together, we'll help girls lift themselves—and their community—out of poverty.

When you invest in girls, you transform their community.

Jays' pitcher-by-committee ploy baffles Braves' bats

Melky Cabrera had three hits, including a two-run single, and four Toronto pitchers combined on a four-hitter to lead the Blue Jays past the Atlanta Braves 3-0 on Wednesday night.

Last-place Toronto went with a pitcher-by-committee approach to fill a hole in the rotation. Esmil Rogers lasted 3 1/3 innings in his first start since 2011, and two pitchers just up from the minors shut down the Braves. Juan Perez (1-0) went 2 2/3 innings, Neil Wagner got through the seventh and eighth, and Casey Janssen earned his 11th save with a 1-2-3 ninth. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Happy days are over

Rangers lose their fondness for Fonzy

John Tortorella was defiant in stating that the New York Rangers didn't take a step back when they were knocked out of the Stanley Cup playoffs in the second round.

General manager Glen Sather thought otherwise and fired the combative coach on Wednesday.

The fiery Tortorella was let go four days after the Rangers' season ended with a Game 5 loss to the Bruins.

Brent Seabrook sent a wrist shot past goalie Jimmy Howard's glove 3:35 into overtime to give the Chicago Blackhawks a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Red Wings in Game 7 of their second-round playoff series on Wednesday night.

The Blackhawks, who had the best record in the NHL regular season, rallied from a 3-1 series deficit to reach the Western Conference final against the defending Stanley Cup champion Los Angeles Kings.

For just the second time in NHL history, the final four teams remaining in the playoffs are the four most recent Stanley Cup winners. Chicago captured the Cup in 2010.

Seabrook picked up a loose puck and skated in on Howard through the middle of the ice, with Detroit defenceman Niklas Kronwall in front of him. His shot hit Kronwall's leg before it sailed into the left side of the net for the defenceman's first goal of the post-season.

"I was just trying to step up," Seabrook said. "The coaches have been on me all year to get up and jump into the play."

The sellout crowd of 22,103 roared as Seabrook skated over to the boards and was mobbed by his delirious teammates.

Howard put his arm around Kronwall, who was down on one knee, and tried to console him while the Blackhawks celebrated.

It was quite a change from the end of the third period, when the Blackhawks thought they had scored the go-ahead goal. But it was waved off with less than two minutes remaining by referee Stephen Walkom, who called a pair of penalties behind the play.

Henrik Zetterberg scored the tying goal in the third period for Detroit. Howard finished with 33 saves.

Setting up camps and storylines

Veterans report to their clubs this weekend for the start of CFL training camps. Here are six players to watch when camps officially open Sunday.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Photos by The Canadian Press

Jon Cornish

The 28-year-old native of New Westminster, B.C., was the CFL's top Canadian last season after running for a league-high 1,457 yards. But his dream season ended bitterly when the Stamps lost 35-22 to the Argonauts in the 100th Grey Cup in Toronto.

Mike Reilly

The Eskimos acquired the six-foot-three, 215-pound Reilly from B.C. in January to compete for the No. 1 job. Reilly spent three seasons as a backup with the Lions. Incumbent Matt Nichols is coming off a dislocated ankle suffered in the East semifinal against Toronto.

Buck Pierce

Injuries have plagued the Bombers starter throughout his CFL career. Despite that, Winnipeg head coach Tim Burke is rolling the dice with Pierce as his starter heading into training camp. Keeping Pierce healthy is crucial considering fourth-stringer Justin Goltz and newcomers Chase Clement and Max Hall are behind him.

Chad Owens

The 31-year-old Hawaii native was an integral part of Toronto's 2012 Grey Cup-winning squad. The CFL's outstanding player had a league-record 3,863 all-purpose yards and was its top receiver with 94 catches for 1,328 yards and six TDs. In April, Owens raised eyebrows by competing in a mixed martial arts event, but emerged unscathed in earning a unanimous decision.

Jamel Richardson

The six-foot-three, 215-pound slotback recorded a fifth-straight 1,000-yard season in 2012 and led the Alouettes with 63 catches for 1,016 yards and five TDs in 15 games. But in 2011, Richardson had 112 catches for 1,777 yards and 11 touchdowns — all career highs — in 17 regular-season contests.

Geroy Simon

B.C. traded the CFL's all-time receiving yards leader to Saskatchewan this off-season. The 37-year-old spent 12 seasons with the Lions but had 54 catches for 700 yards and two touchdowns in 2012 due to hamstring injuries, the first time in 10 seasons he didn't surpass the 1,000-yard plateau.

Simon needs 29 catches to break Ben Cahoon's all-time record (1,017).

French Open

Milos Raonic moves ahead into third round

Canadian Milos Raonic defeated Frenchman Michael Llodra in four sets Wednesday to advance to the third round of the French Open. Raonic, the No. 15 seed from Thornhill, Ont., had 24 aces in the 7-5, 3-6, 7-6 (3), 6-2 victory on the Lenglen showcase court at Roland Garros.

"It was a difficult match," said Raonic, who improved to 4-0 lifetime against Llodra. "Mica's not just tough for me to play, he's tough for everyone."

"I'm very content with my tennis, I played well today. My serve is the most important part of my game and it worked well today. When it does that, I always play better."

Raonic will next face big-serving South African Kevin Anderson, who beat Russian Evgeny Donskoy 6-7 (8), 6-1, 7-5, 6-2.

Raonic recorded four breaks in 12 chances against Llodra.

"He does a lot of things to make you feel uncomfortable," Raonic said of the local favourite.

NHL playoffs. Iginla facing down what could have been vs. Bruins

Faced with the choice of his hockey life, Jarome Iginla figured he couldn't go wrong.

As the hours before the March 28 trade deadline ticked away and the suitors for the Calgary Flames' captain dwindled down to Boston and Pittsburgh, the six-time all-star understood both franchises provided him the chance to win his first Stanley Cup.

Only one, however, included the added bonus of playing with good friend Sidney Crosby. And when the Penguins lured Iginla east in the middle of the night, the ripple effect forced the Bruins to a backup plan that turned out better than they imagined.

Spurned by Iginla, the Bruins acquired Jaromir Jagr from Dallas hours later. Now the two clubs — and their two high-profile late additions — find themselves in each other's way as the Eastern Conference finals get set to begin Saturday.

"I knew that there was a possibility this would be the case," Iginla said.

One that just as easily could have arisen if Iginla opted for Boston instead. While it appeared for a few hours the Bruins had the inside track,

Jarome Iginla GETTY IMAGES

Iginla insists he didn't back out of a deal with Boston when the Penguins swooped in at the last minute.

"I never said yes and then no," Iginla said.

Though the Bruins initially disagreed — claiming an agreement was in place — they have since moved on.

"I always thought you had to go through them to get to where we want to go at some point," Boston general manager Peter Chiarelli said. "It's been well chronicled, the Iginla stuff and the Jagr stuff, so we're happy with who we got."

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

The pace of life will quicken over the next few days but that won't worry you in the slightest. On the contrary, the more challenges you face, the more you will like it — and the more you will accomplish.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Don't be tempted to focus on anything but your primary goal. Upheavals will disrupt things but if you are clear in what it is you are aiming for, you won't be affected.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Keep your ultimate goal in mind today. The more you think about it, the more likely it is to become a part of your reality, if not immediately then certainly by the start of next week. It's all good.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Try not to do everything yourself. There are others who think and feel the same as you, and they will happily share the load if you ask them. Not even a Cancerian can change the world on their own.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Slow down and enjoy the good things in life. As Mars moves into the friendship area of your chart, you should be looking for an excuse to party.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

It's good to be successful and it's good to be first but don't put winning ahead of everything else today or you could miss out on something wonderful. There are other ways to get on in the world.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You can be more forceful about solving certain problems when action planet Mars moves in your favour again tomorrow. Today though, you are advised to relax.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

If you doubt what you are doing, your mind will create obstacles and your doubts will become self-fulfilling. Be positive at all times and before you know it, your dreams will start coming true.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

It does not matter how many times you have failed in the past, what matters is that you are going to succeed in the future. Don't let anyone tell you that you don't have what it takes to succeed.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Cosmic activity in the work area of your chart will encourage you to push harder over the next few days. Don't push yourself so hard though that you risk a breakdown. You need moments of relaxation.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You are who you are for a reason, so follow your instincts wherever they may lead you and don't waste your time worrying what others might think about it.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

In the past, you have forced yourself to adapt your desires to fit in with what others expected of you. Now they must be the ones who adapt to fit in with you. SALLY BROMPTON
